To the United Nations,

I, TIAGO VENTURA COSTA, a Brazilian citizen, hereby submit a complaint alleging violations of the principle of the peaceful use of outer space through secret treaties (classified as state secrets) entered into by NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and the United States of America, with the participation of several other States, including Brazil.

The purpose of this complaint is to seek the investigation of possible violations of International Space Law, particularly the principles and obligations established in the Outer Space Treaty of 1967 and the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space of 1976. Both are multilateral United Nations instruments that have been in force for approximately half a century and are widely recognized as normative pillars of the international governance of space activities.

The Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space, adopted in 1974 and in force since 1976, imposes on launching States the obligation to provide the United Nations with essential information regarding space objects launched, especially concerning the general function of the object. This legal regime aims to ensure transparency in space activities, traceability and the attribution of international responsibility for damage, the reduction of risks of conflict and military escalation, the promotion of the peaceful use of outer space, and the security and sustainability of the orbital environment.

Complementarily, the Outer Space Treaty, approved by the United Nations General Assembly in 1966 and in force since October 10, 1967, establishes in its Article I that outer space shall be explored and used for peaceful purposes, for the benefit of all humankind. This foundational principle has guided International Space Law for more than fifty years and imposes upon States the continuous duty to align their space activities with the values of peace, international cooperation, and transparency.

Within this consolidated normative context, the United Nations bears a central role in preserving the international legal order governing outer space. This role entails the institutional obligation to receive, register, and formally examine complaints related to possible violations of space treaties; to take an institutional position regarding their legal and procedural framing; to assess the need to establish investigative mechanisms; and to act as a multilateral forum for the prevention of conflicts related to the use of outer space. The absence of an institutional response to a formal complaint may weaken the effectiveness of the legal regime that the Organization itself is mandated to uphold.

There are allegations supported by technical and circumstantial indicators that NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and the United States of America, in coordination with other States, have been promoting international agreements of a confidential nature, classified as state secrets, related to the launch and operation of space objects incompatible with the principle of the peaceful use of outer space.

Part of these indicators shows correlation with symptoms widely described in technical literature and international governmental investigations, commonly associated with the so-called Havana Syndrome. Such symptoms include neurological, cognitive, and vestibular manifestations theoretically compatible with exposure to directed electromagnetic energy sources, notably microwaves. This correlation does not constitute a factual conclusion, but rather an indicative element that justifies the need for independent technical investigation.

Additionally, there is an allegation regarding the existence of misappropriated military equipment currently in the possession of a criminal faction operating in Brazil, which would possess the technical capability to access, interact with, or operate directed energy weapon systems allegedly hosted on satellites in Earth orbit. It is noted that the physical location of this equipment is known to competent authorities and that this element constitutes concrete and verifiable material evidence, potentially sufficient to support the initiation of formal investigative procedures. The equipment is in the possession of ISMAEL HOMEM DE OLIVEIRA and has been operated in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, in the city of Porto Alegre (Rua Garibaldi 954 – Apartment 52 – Independência District).

The complainant further reports that he has allegedly been a victim of acts of coercion associated with the use of a directed energy weapon, in a context of retaliation for his actions in reporting the aforementioned criminal faction. This account is submitted as a personal declaration for purposes of record and impartial investigation, and is relevant to defining the scope of the investigation and to the possible consideration of protective measures for the complainant.

If confirmed, the existence and operation of space objects equipped with directed energy weapons, as well as the possibility of non-state access to such systems, would be materially incompatible with international treaties that have been in force for approximately half a century. Such circumstances would violate the principle of the peaceful use of outer space, undermine the transparency required by the Registration Convention, and increase risks to collective security and the stability of the international legal order.

In light of the foregoing, it is formally requested that the United Nations receive and register this complaint and issue an institutional position thereon; initiate an international, technical, and independent investigative procedure regarding the possible use of directed energy weapons associated with space objects; investigate the potential correlation between such systems and symptoms associated with the so-called Havana Syndrome; verify compliance with registration obligations, particularly with respect to the actual function of launched space objects; specifically investigate the existence, location, and capabilities of the misappropriated military equipment; request formal explanations from the States involved; consider protective measures for the complainant; and adopt preventive and corrective measures aimed at preserving the peaceful character of outer space, including scrutiny of the participation of NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and the United States of America in the conclusion of secret treaties that violate the public treaties in force mentioned herein.

This complaint is submitted on the basis of converging indicators and a relevant personal account, with the objective of promoting impartial investigation, ensuring an institutional response by the United Nations, and preserving the integrity of space treaties that have been in force for more than fifty years and that enshrine outer space as a domain intended for the benefit of all humankind.

Respectfully,
TIAGO VENTURA COSTA
Brazilian Citizen
